Arc System Works developed Project ARMS. It is a fighting game in the Tekken series. It's a 2D fighting game with a 3D feel. It was released for Playstation 3 and Windows. Now it's playable in xbox as well. It features 1on1 fighters as well as tag team. There's some official "supports" from Sony. These supports are only available on ps3. They are: Camber, Dynamic Lighting, Check Mate, Customisation, Special Attacks, Shadow Attacks, Special Opponents, Drop Bolt, Toxic, Synergiser, Game Specific Support. There's a whole bunch of other little things, but i'm not really sure. There's a few other things such as: Importance Level, Game Mode, and replay. All of them are important for a fighting game. In arc system works, you can import your character from a customise game. There's also unlockable characters, a story mode, arena modes, etc. In terms of gameplay, it's a pretty standard fighting game. You pick a character, you punch, kick, jump, etc. Depending on the opponent. You can punch, kick, jump, shoot, ect. In arena mode, you fight until you reach a pre-set score. In game mode, you are faced with another character. In both of these modes, you must tag a tag team partner to help you fight. Character progression, attacks, and combos are also the same as in the ps3 version. In terms of graphics, it has a nice 3D feel. It looks good! Although the graphics can be rather dark. Some parts of it are so dark, you can't see the character, just shadows. Overall, the graphics are good. The weapons, poses, and animations are generally similar to the ps3 version. All of the poses are pre-set, so they are mostly the same. There are some poses available in the normal game, you can unlock those. In terms of features, the only "new" feature is the combos. You are now able to use combos in arena and game modes. They are called "special attacks". You can change which special attack you use with the number buttons. Now I know this is a fighting game, but i don't think anyone uses combos to determine winning and losing. There's a couple more features. Like stage select. You can use the right button to switch characters on the stage. When the stage is done, it goes

System Requirements:

The objective is to create balanced, easy to handle, complete, and interesting loadouts that can be easily customized for various games. These loadouts can include RPG class spells, vehicle upgrades, and main weapons. Each loadout can be complete or primarily pistols. This mod will try to make them realistic enough that they can even be purchased in shops. I will try to balance them with a few common classes and weapons so that they can be played with multiple classes. Installation: There are two main types of loadouts, or weapon kits. The first
